What is a cookie?

A "cookie" is a small text file containing information. It is stored in your computer or mobile unit for technical reasons and to make it easier for you to use TMR's website and apps. The time a cookie is stored in your web browser or unit varies. "Persistent cookies" will be stored in your computer or unit until they are deleted or have reached their expiration date. They can be used to adapt this website based on your choices and interests as a visitor. "Session cookies" are not saved when you close your web browser. When you use a website or app, session cookies are sent between your unit and the server to collect information.

We work continuously to improve TMR's website and apps. For this purpose, we use tools such as Google Analytics and Adobe Analytics to analyze the behaviour of our website visitors.

How we use cookies

We use cookies and other identifiers to improve your browsing experience and make surfing on TMR's site as pleasant as possible, e.g. by:

- recognizing you when you log in and remembering your preferences
- evaluating your behaviour so that we can make improvements
- sending relevant communication
- assessing the effect of advertising activities
- improving security
